The Federal Communications Commission RE: Docket 04-435
445 12th Street, SW
Washington, DC 20554

Dear FCC Commissioners ,

Air travel has grown more stressful in the last few years. Cell phones, while useful in some ways, cell phones are sources of aggravation in cramped public spaces.

Adding this element to the tense situations on airliners these days seems only a way to create a more intolerable experience for travelers.

I can move to another seat on a bus if someone decides to use their phone in an indiscrete manner. I can do the same in a train car. But in an airplane this is seldom if ever an option. You're just stuck with no recourse. These-mostly casual-conversations can wait for the landing. Please don't open the airliners to cell phone use!

Sincerely,

Curtis Borg
